Measuring Up in Education Steven Stolz, R. Scott Webster, 2020-05-21 Cultures of measurement are often considered to dominate educational practices to the degree that as Biesta 2010 has identified in Good Education in an Age of Measurement we no longer measure what we value but rather we have become conditioned to value what is measured A clear example of this occurs when institutions and staff teach to the test by emphasising narrow conceptions of learning and of knowledge simply because the consequences of high stakes assessments have important implications regarding funding resources and even tenure This collection explores via various philosophical means how valuable educational practices can occur within and beyond cultures of measurement What seems to be required is for practitioners in education to regain their relationship to the overall purposes of education such as the furthering of justice and democracy for both individual students and societies as a whole. Such a reconnection has the potential to re-humanise curricular experiences for students which may have become dehumanised through particular cultures of measurement. It is argued that certain legitimate measures can advance justice and democracy and so careful attention must be assigned to their validity and value. This book was originally published as a special issue of Educational Philosophy and Theory.

Measuring Up Janet E. Wall, Garry Richard Walz, 2004. This intense handbook covers a variety of issues from best standardized testing procedures to evaluating student achievement through performance standards. Included are special topics like the assessment of students with mental or behavioral problems helping students with limited English proficiency and ethnic differences incorporated into testing. The role of the educator or counselor is studied while reporting test results to parents or social service agencies facilitating career development and designing needs assessment for individuals or programs.

Measuring Up in Higher Education Anthony Welch, Jun Li, 2021-05-03. This book examines the quality assessment movement in academic scholarship as globalization prompts a search for global measures of university services and output. It gauges productivity in terms of universal publication metrics and considers ranking and research productivity from a comparative perspective. The book considers the use of the impact factor as a gauge of publication value noting that this is less important in countries lacking central government appropriations to universities and to research. It argues that pressure to publish in certain journals and to research topics of interest to English language readers has been felt differentially in English language systems compared to others but also that performance pressures fall more on younger more junior contract staff than on senior and tenured professors. It problematizes international comparisons of quality and analyses the benefits of a zone of ideas and metrics in a common language promoting international mobility efficiency collaboration but also the costs which are rarely borne equally across countries languages and cultures. The book provides a strong evidence based contribution to major debates in contemporary higher education reforms and the measurement of academic output.

Measuring Up Robert Rothman, 1995-03-29. Rothman offers a highly accessible examination of the shift in thinking about testing. Illustrative case studies of assessment programs provide a window into the classrooms showing how change has come about and what the new methods actually look like in practice.
