

Standards of Practice for Medical Interpreters

Pre-conference:

When possible hold a Pre-conference to determine the provider's goal for the medical interview.

Introduction:

Formally introduce yourself to both the patient and provider.

Referrals:

The interpreter is able to refer the patient to the appropriate support services rather than assuming the social work role.

Positioning:

The seating arrangement will be adjusted to ensure the most interaction between the provider and patient.

Privacy:

Allow privacy as dictated by the appointment type.

Body Cues:

Observe and report any body language cues that might not be observed by the provide.

Communication Modes:

Choose the appropriate mode of interpretation for the specific medical event. First or third person, consecutive versus simultaneous.

Accuracy:

Accurately transmits information between the patient and provider.

No omissions, additions:

The interpreter will not omit, delete or add information to the interpretation session.

Transparency:

Clarification:

Asks for repetition, explanation or verification of concepts when appropriate.

Confidentiality:

Ensure that confidentiality and the interpreter's Code of Ethics are maintained.

All verbalization will be transmitted:

Limited advocacy:

Advocacy is only done upon systemic barriers and is done within a team operation.

Cultural Brokerage:

Cultural brokerage is only done when communication breaks down and is requested by the provider to assist in understanding a cultural nuance. Although the interpreter may be a cultural expert it cannot be assumed that an individual will be knowledgeable to all the diversity given within an ethnic group.

The voice of the patient and providers:

The interpreter does not advise, counsel or interject personal opinions.

The interpreter is not the educator or the provider but rather the voice and ears for the parties involved.

Diplomacy:

Diplomatically negotiates difficult situations with patients, providers and staff.

Conference calls:

Encourages conference calls to facilitate communications between the providers and patient.

Transmission of information:

Interpreters shall render the message faithfully, always conveying the content and spirit of the speaker, using language most readily understood by the person whom they service.

Testing and Assessment in Translation and Interpreting Studies Claudia V. Angelelli, Holly E. Jacobson, 2009-10-22 Testing and Assessment in Translation and Interpreting Studies examines issues of measurement that are essential to translation and interpreting. Conceptualizing testing both as a process and a product, the collection of papers explores these issues across languages and settings including university classrooms, research projects, the private sector, and professional associations. The authors have approached their chapters from different perspectives using a variety of methods, some focusing on very specific variables and others providing a much broader overview of the issues at hand. Chapters range from a discussion of the measurement of text cohesion in translation, the measurement of interactional competence in interpreting, the use of a particular scale to measure interpreters' renditions, to the application of a specific approach to grading or general program assessment such as interpreter or translator certification at the national level or program admissions processes. These studies point to the need for greater integration of research and practice in the specific area of testing and assessment and are a welcome addition to the field.

Marschark, Rico Peterson, Elizabeth A. Winston, Patricia Sapere, Carol M. Convertino, Rosemarie Seewagen, Christine Monikowski, 2005-04-14 More the 1 46 million people in the United States have hearing losses in sufficient severity to be considered deaf another 21 million people have other hearing impairments For many deaf and hard of hearing individuals sign language and voice interpreting is essential to their participation in educational programs and their access to public and private services However there is less than half the number of interpreters needed to meet the demand interpreting quality is often variable and there is a considerable lack of knowledge of factors that contribute to successful interpreting Perhaps it is not surprising then that a study by the National Association of the Deaf NAD found that 70% of the deaf individuals are dissatisfied with interpreting quality Because recent legislation in the United States and elsewhere has mandated access to educational employment and other contexts for deaf individuals and others with hearing disabilities there is an increasing need for quality sign language interpreting It is in education however that the need is most pressing particularly because more than 75% of deaf students now attend regular schools rather than schools for the deaf where teachers and classmates are unable to sign for themselves In the more than 100 interpreter training programs in the U S alone there are a variety of educational models but little empirical information on how to evaluate them or determine their appropriateness in different interpreting and interpreter education covering what we know what we do not know and what we should know Several volumes have covered interpreting and interpreter education there are even some published dissertations that have included a single research study and a few books have attempted to offer methods for professional interpreters or interpreter educators with nods to existing research This is the first volume that synthesizes existing work and provides a coherent picture of the field as a whole including evaluation of the extent to which current practices are supported by validating research It will be the first comprehensive source suitable as both a reference book and a textbook for interpreter training
