

"Run it again!" Three words any college athlete is familiar with. In the hot summer sun, the coach attempts to inspire me ~~with true saying like and those on the field as he proclaims~~. "Champions keep playing until they get it right, they are not born they are made!" My body begins to wear down due to the repetition of the drill. My legs become heavy and my lungs feel as if they are on fire. My mind screams at my body, begging me to stop. This is the crossroad in which my true character will be determined. In this moment the words of Thomas Jefferson ring true. He inquired as I did then, "Do you want to know who you are? Don't ask. Act! Action will delineate and define you." ~~All an athlete's athletic~~ understanding that the moment will arrive when ~~their~~ ~~his~~ body and mind will demand that they quit out of sheer self-preservation, but ~~they~~ ~~for years he has been training to overcome these thoughts, train and prepare to overcome this temptation.~~ In setting a goal to achieve athletic greatness you must strive to execute through the droddges of drill and the sting of the mounting repetitions. You must demonstrate self-discipline at a time when the path of least resistance beckons. Many arrive at this moment of consequence however few rise to the occasion and succeed.

As a scholarship athlete in a major college football conference, perseverance and preparation are integral to success. You must be prepared to act instantaneously and be ultimately unafraid to fail. It was on the football field where I learned to battle through adversity. ~~Ten days before the opening game of my final year, I suffered a knee injury that in my final year of football I suffered a serious injury to my knee. The injury occurred only ten days before the opening game of the season and threatened to disrupt a season I had spent a lifetime preparing for. When adversity strikes we are defined by the choices that we make in response. Only days removed from the surgery to repair my knee, I faced the reality that my season was in jeopardy. Determined to compete in every minute in which my body would allow I chose to begin fervently rehabbing my knee with the full intention of defying the odds and taking the field in the season opening game. With sutures in my knee, and blood staining my uniform, I took the field and competed with my teammates. It was a victory for myself. I was unwilling to let an injury take what I had worked for. When faced with adversity I chose to respond and stood confidently and as I stood proudly on the field with my teammates. Soon however I was brought to my knees as I was faced with perhaps the most difficult situation in my life. The hour of rehab and surgeries had been easy to overcome. Soon, however, I was brought back down to my knees in a situation far more important than a college football game.~~

Only several weeks after ~~surgery to my knee~~ my return to the field, my first child was born into this world, ~~prematurely~~, at twenty-nine weeks gestation. He arrived fragile and ~~new~~, struggling to breath. I stood and watched as the Doctors worked feverishly around the clock to keep him alive—I was there every step of the way, but there was nothing I could do to help. The helplessness I felt as the doctors were working feverishly to keep him alive is the most distressing feeling one can have. All I could do was listen to the Doctors and pray—I was powerless, and it was the most helpless feeling in the world. ~~No~~ amount of bravado or blood on my uniform would be able to help my son as he fought to survive. I realized then that I did not truly understand what those moments on

Comment [SM1]: I like the intriguing start.

Comment [SM2]: I think at this point you've exhausted quotes in this opening paragraph. I would seriously consider replacing these sentences to just lead into the next, without the quote. When you have too many of these, the reader becomes lost.

Comment [SM3]: This has now become a little too philosophical. Ask yourself, what does this tell the admissions committee about me as a candidate for medical school. To me, it reads that you are putting athletes on a little bit more of a pedestal (which you have already done earlier in this paragraph, but up until this point you had done it gracefully). I'm really not sure what this adds and I think in worst case scenario, someone may read it and think you are coming across cocky or conceited.

Comment [SM4]: Isn't this exactly what you recounted in paragraph 1. A transition is ok, but why repeat it again?

Comment [SM5]: If you can say it in 10 words instead of 15, do so.

Comment [SM6]: I feel it is much better to tell the reader a story, instead of telling them what you think the story meant. They will sort that out themselves. If you do the latter, you again risk sounding cocky.

Comment [SM7]: Word choice! I think the word new should be replaced here. Maybe small, premature, sick, or even nothing at all...
