FABLES

The Proud Oak

Once upon a time, in a beautiful forest, there stood a tall, old oak tree. He was so proud of his height and strength that he looked down on all the other trees with disdain. One day, a gentle reed grew up near the oak. The reed was much shorter and thinner than the oak, but he was very strong and flexible.

"You are so insignificant," the oak said, looking down at the reed. "You are so weak and fragile. You will be blown away by the first strong wind." The reed smiled and said, "I may be small, but I am not weak. I am strong and flexible. I can bend with the wind, but I will not break. You, on the other hand, are so proud and so strong that you will break when the wind comes. You will be left as a pile of logs, and I will still be here, standing tall and strong."

One day, a very strong wind came. The oak tree was so proud and so strong that he did not bend. He stood straight up, and the wind was so strong that it broke the oak tree in half. The reed, on the other hand, was so strong and flexible that he bent with the wind. He did not break, and he was still there when the wind stopped. The oak tree was left as a pile of logs, and the reed was still standing tall and strong.
