Estlin Carpenter,2013 Comparative Religion The study of Comparative Religion assumes that religion is already in existence It deals with actual usages which it places side by side to see what light they can throw upon each other It leaves the task of formulating definitions to philosophy It is not concerned with origins and does not project itself into the prehistoric past where conjecture takes the place of evidence An old miracle play directed Adam to pass across the stage going to be created Whether religion first appeared in the cultus of the dead or only entered the field after the collapse of a reign of magic which had ceased to satisfy man's demands for help or was born of dread and desired to keep its gods at a distance only remotely affects the process of discovering and examining the resemblances of its forms and interpreting the forces without and within which have produced them The sphere of speculation has its own attractions but in this little book an attempt will be made to keep to facts Three hundred years ago Edward Herbert an Oxford scholar who played many parts and played them well in deep revolt against the ecclesiastical doctrine that all the world outside the pale of the Church was doomed to eternal damnation devoted himself to the study of comparative religion With the materials which the classics afforded him he examined the recorded facts among the Greeks and Romans the Carthaginians and Arabs the Phrygians the Persians the Assyrians The whole fabric of human experience was built up he argued on certain common knowledges or notions which could be distinguished by specific marks such as priority independence universality certainty necessity for man's well being and immediacy Here were the bases of law in relation to social order and of religion in relation to the Powers
