Gershon, 2015-11-25 Ever wondered what it would be like to be a street magician in Paris A fish farmer in Norway A costume designer in Bollywood This playful and accessible look at different types of work around the world delivers a wealth of information and advice about a wide array of jobs and professions The value of this book is twofold For young people or middle aged people who are undecided about their career paths and feel constrained in their choices A World of Work offers an expansive vision For ethnographers this book offers an excellent example of using the practical details of everyday life to shed light on larger structural issues Each chapter in this collection of ethnographic fiction could be considered a job manual Yet not any typical job manual to do justice to the ways details about jobs are conveyed in culturally specific ways the authors adopt a range of voices and perspectives One chapter is written as though it was a letter from an older sister counseling her brother on how to be a doctor in Malawi Another is framed as a eulogy for a well loved village magistrate in Papua New Guinea who may have been killed by sorcery Beneath the novelty of the examples are some serious messages that Ilana Gershon highlights in her introduction These ethnographies reveal the connection between work and culture the impact of societal values on the conditions of employment Readers will be surprised at how much they can learn about an entire culture by being given the chance to understand just one occupation License to Spill Rachel Plotnick, 2025-04-29 How everyday wetness from finger smudges sweat and spilled drinks to showering and swimming collides with consumers media devices designed to stay dry License to Spill investigates the everyday moments activities and spaces where media technologies and liquids collide from disastrous spilled drinks that corrode laptops and drops in the toilet that drown smartphones to the greasy finger smudges and sweat droplets that sully screens and glitch smartwatches Putting historical and present day case studies in conversation Rachel Plotnick considers how people's experiences with media devices inevitably encounter wetness and yet consumers not the companies who make the devices take the blame when leaks spillages and overflows occur Along with thinking about preventive measures and device caretaking License to Spill examines how water resistant and waterproofed technologies through their design and marketing imagine the brawniest and hardest of users meant to punish and abuse their tough devices granting them unfettered permission to get wet Examining a long history of torture testing and hyperbolic claims of imperviousness the book demonstrates how protective designs relate to broader cultural ideas about media use as sporty luxurious excessive or messy This context is especially relevant given that the market for water resistant bags cases coatings and seals has flourished over the past decade with new rhetoric about wetness as natural and digital technologies as ever present The book pushes us to attend to both the ideals and problems that arise when designing resilient devices ranging from the right to repair movement and lawsuits over ingress protection IP ratings to obsolescence culture and work from home activities in the wake of the COVID 19 pandemic
