Note: From the examples in class and the above answers it should be clear to you that constructing Punnett squares will make solving the problems so much easier – and error-free. I would suggest you do so for the following problems as well. Combining each row with each column gives you the cells of the Punnett square.

Resulting phenotypic ratio: 100% short tails, resulting genotypic ratio: 100% L/l

b) a long tail cat and a short tail cat
