and grammatical production between the groups paper IV The findings indicated that the prosodic features stress and tonal word accent affect repetition performance in children with DLD HI and TLD In general the children with DLD and HI achieved lower results than the children with TLD on repetition of segments consonants and vowels and prosodic features but tonal word accent was repeated with relatively high accuracy Tonal word accent 1 was more accurately repeated than tonal word accent 2 by the DLD and HI children The children with TLD repeated tonal word accent with few errors but segments in nonwords with tonal word accent 2 were easier to repeat than segments in nonwords with tonal word accent 1 The results further revealed that the ability of children with DLD to repeat stress in real words is related to expressive grammar but repetition of prosodic features does not reflect general language knowledge In contrast repetition of both segmental and prosodic nonword features may be indicative of receptive vocabulary phonological production during naming of familiar words and expressive grammar in children with HI Repetition performance might be related to the degree of HI before cochlear implantation or fitting of hearing aids Children with DLD and children with HI demonstrate similar strengths and weaknesses in phonological and grammatical production despite the fact that they develop language under different conditions with and without normal hearing Tonal word accent use and syntax are relatively unimpaired in DLD and HI children This thesis highlights prosodic and phonological strengths and weaknesses in children who have or are at risk of deficits in language and communication abilities It also supports word and nonword repetition as potential predictors of some aspects of language ability in children with DLD and HI Further it emphasizes the importance of taking prosody into account when constructing or interpreting results from repetition tasks Future research aiming to investigate the relationship between prosody in repetition and language cognition and hearing should use longitudinal study designs and include younger children Studies comparing prosodic and phonological ability in children with DLD and children with HI should employ both quantitative and qualitative analyses

Aaron,2013-05-13 Until about two decades ago the study of writing systems and their relationship to literacy acquisition was sparse and generally modeled after studies of English language learners This situation is now changing As the worldwide demand for literacy continues to grow researchers from different countries with different language backgrounds have begun examining the connection between their writing systems and literacy acquisition This text which derives from a NATO sponsored conference on orthography and literacy brings together the research of 70 scholars from across the world the largest assemblage of such experts to date Their findings are grouped into three parts as follows Part I Literacy Acquisition in Different Writing Systems describes the relationship between orthography and literacy in twenty five orthographic systems This section serves as a handy reference source for understanding the orthographies of languages as diverse as Arabic Chinese English Icelandic Kannada and Kishwahili Part II Literacy Acquisition From a Cross Linguistic Perspective makes direct comparisons of literacy acquisition in English and other orthographic systems The overall conclusion that emerges from these eight chapters is that the depth of an orthographic system does influence literacy acquisition primarily by slowing down the acquisition of reading skills Even so studies show that dyslexic readers can be found across all orthographic systems whether shallow or deep which shows that dyslexia also has internal cognitive and biological components Part III Literacy Acquisition Instructional Perspectives explores literacy acquisition from developmental and instructional perspectives and ends with a look into the future of literacy research This Handbook is appropriate for scholars researchers and graduate students in such diverse fields as cognitive psychology psycholinguistics literacy education English as a second language and communication disorders
