Nursing and Healthcare Pearl Shihab,2010 Competency in Maths is essential for safe nursing practice this is the only text to clearly explain Maths specifically for students in nursing and healthcare expelling the tears and frustration that can be experienced whilst trying to grapple with the subject The author has been teaching anatomy physiology and pharmacology to nursing students for 25 years and is well placed to understand the fears that students have when addressing numbers and maths This text will help students to handle numbers confidently in the administration of drugs and other practice settings Clinical examples will be used to illustrate the use of arithmetic and the student will be able to work at their own pace throughout In addition to drug calculations the text will allow students to feel confident in other practice settings such as calculating the body mass index BMI of a patient reading and interpreting a blood result back from the lab interpreting demographic data calculating the nutritional intake for a patient and measuring a patient s blood pressure pulse and temperature Shihab draws on her 25 years of teaching experience to provide a text devoted specifically to competency in the often dreaded area of maths for student nurses THES Feb 2010 MyMathLab is really good I especially like the common clinical measurements and physiological measurement questions because I can really relate them to practice I even take the book to practice with me because it is such an easy read for me as I have never worked in healthcare before I feel like I have numeracy skills published for both nursing students and employees Purpose Nurses need numeracy skills to calculate drug dosage and IV flow rates as part of safe patient care The purpose of this study is to target instructional support for improved nurse numeracy skills toward the end of improved patient care Methods The current study employed a math test administered to 47 community college RN students The test assessed both general and clinical numeracy skills The hypothesis was that test results would identify specific skills that could be targeted for intervention at the pre RN program high school RN program or professional development levels Results Data showed RN students most in need of intervention in decimal and percent use for general skills with application to drug dosages requiring multiple unit conversions Clinical numeracy scores correlated significantly with general numeracy scores Contrast among first vs later semester RN students showed that scores of first semester students were higher than for those further progressed in the program Conclusion These data suggest a need for increased instruction in decimal and percent operations and use of these operations to compute drug dosage in a context of proportion or dimensional analysis These data also emphasize the importance of admission criteria and continuing education in dosage calculation
