Christine Isom-Verhaaren,2011-05-30 In 1543 the Ottoman fleet appeared off the coast of France to bombard and lay siege to the city of Nice The operation under the command of Admiral Barbarossa came in response to a request from Francois I of France for assistance from Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent in France's struggle against Charles V the Habsburg Holy Roman Emperor and King of Spain This military alliance between mutual infidels the Christian French King and the Muslim Sultan aroused intense condemnation on religious grounds from the Habsburgs and their supporters as an aberration from accepted diplomacy Memories of the Crusades were after all still very much alive in Europe and an alliance with the Turk seemed unthinkable to many Allies with the Infidel places the events of 1543 and the subsequent wintering of the Ottoman fleet in Toulon in the context of the power politics of the sixteenth century Relying on contemporary Ottoman and French sources it presents the realpolitik of diplomacy with infidels in the early modern era The result is essential reading for students and scholars of European history Ottoman Studies and of relations between the Christian and Islamic worlds

Women and Faith Lucetta Scaraffia, Gabriella Zarri, 1999 This study of Italian women and Catholicism from the fourth through the twentieth century reflects this conflict and the tension between the masculine character of divinity in the Catholic church and the potential for equality in the gospels and early writings neither male nor female but one in Jesus
