Betsinger, Sharon N. DeWitte,2020-11-05 Urbanization has long been a focus of bioarchaeological research but what is missing from the literature is an exploration of the geographic and temporal range of human biological demographic and sociocultural responses to this major shift in settlement pattern Urbanization is characterized by increased population size and density and is frequently assumed to produce negative biological effects However the relationship between urbanization and human health requires careful examination given the heterogeneity that exists within and between urban contexts Studies of contemporary urbanization have found both positive and negative outcomes which likely have parallels in past human societies This volume is unique as there is no current bioarchaeological book addressing urbanization despite various studies of urbanization having been conducted Collectively this volume provides a more holistic understanding of the relationships between urbanization and various aspects of human population health The insight gained from this volume will provide not only a better understanding of urbanization in our past but it will also have potential implications for those studying urbanization in contemporary communities

Cooperation and Hierarchy in Ancient Bolivia Sara L. Juengst,2023-02-28 This book explores how past peoples navigated and created power structures and social relationships using a case study from the Titicaca Basin of Bolivia 800 BC AD 400 Based on the analysis of human skeletal remains it combines anthropological social theory archaeological contexts and biological indicators of identity disease and labor to present a microhistory The analysis moves in scale from individual experiences of daily life to broad patterns of shared identity and kinship during a time of significant economic and ecological change in the lake basin The volume is particularly valuable for scholars and students interested in what bioarchaeology can tell us about power and social relationships in the past and how this is relevant to modern constructions of community
