

PROTEIN SYNTHESIS

TRANSLATION

1. Transcription and translation are the two processes by which the information in a gene is used to make a protein. Transcription is the process by which the information in a gene is used to make a messenger RNA (mRNA) molecule. Translation is the process by which the information in an mRNA molecule is used to make a protein.

2. During transcription, the DNA double helix is unwound and one strand is used as a template to make a complementary mRNA strand. The mRNA strand is then processed and transported out of the nucleus to the cytoplasm, where it is translated into a protein. The protein is then folded into a specific shape and performs its function.

THE GENETIC CODE

"One codon at a time"

1. Biological systems use sequences of three nucleotides to specify the amino acids that are used to build proteins. These sequences are called codons. Each codon specifies a particular amino acid.

2. Experiments during the 1960s demonstrated that the genetic code is a triplet code. This means that each amino acid is specified by a sequence of three nucleotides.

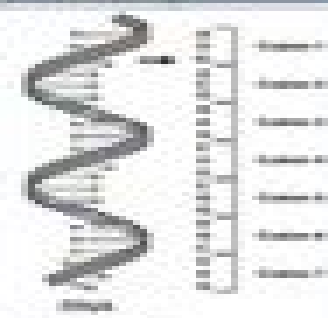

3. The genetic code is universal, meaning that it is the same in all organisms. This is evidence that all life on Earth shares a common ancestor.

"One gene - one protein"

1. Each gene contains the instructions for making a specific protein. The sequence of nucleotides in a gene determines the sequence of amino acids in the protein.
