disciplines involve learning about statistics another potential source of anxiety for students who are uncomfortable with dealing with numerical content Research on mathematical anxiety is a truly interdisciplinary field with contributions from educational developmental cognitive social and neuroscience researchers The current collection of papers demonstrates the diversity of the field offering both new empirical contributions and reviews of existing studies The contributors also outline future directions for this line of research

Computational Methods for Understanding Complexity: The Use of Formal Methods in Biology David A. Rosenblueth, 2016-11-21 The complexity of living organisms surpasses our unaided abilities of analysis Hence computational and mathematical methods are necessary for increasing our understanding of biological systems At the same time there has been a phenomenal recent progress allowing the application of novel formal methods to new domains This progress has spurred a conspicuous optimism in computational biology This optimism in turn has promoted a rapid increase in collaboration between specialists of biology with specialists of computer science Through sheer complexity however many important biological problems are at present intractable and it is not clear whether we will ever be able to solve such problems We are in the process of learning what kind of model and what kind of analysis and synthesis techniques to use for a particular problem Some existing formalisms have been readily used in biological problems others have been adapted to biological needs and still others have been especially developed for biological systems This Research Topic has examples of cases 1 employing existing methods 2 adapting methods to biology and 3 developing new methods We can also see discrete and Boolean models and the use of both simulators and model checkers Synthesis is exemplified by manual and by machine learning methods We hope that the articles collected in this Research Topic will stimulate new research
