

The influences of Nature and Nurture on Human Development Sample Essay

For a long time now, there has been a controversy on nurture versus nature in development of humans. I do not expect the debate to stop any time soon based on the fact that nobody has been able to come up with a solid answer for it. As a result, I intend to carry out an extensive research on the same and offer my opinion.

To begin with, nature means is concerned with traits that are genetically inherited while nurture means environmental issues that impact human development (Kail, & Cavanaugh, 2013). These two features are very significant and influential in a person's development. Nature on the other hand plays a crucial role in affecting the innate of an individual and nurture, affects environmental experiences of the person.

With the above in mind, it is therefore not impossible to underrate the impact of nurture and nature's expense and vice versa. This is the case based on some human development features that depend on nature while others rely on nurture. According to Bouchard, Malina, and Perusse (1997), the environment and genetics are intrinsically connected features and as a result, it is quite difficult to understand genetic characteristics without referring to nature and vice versa.

This is quite true because development of humans is an aspect that is multifaceted and calls for proper understanding of the two features. Knowledge is indeed in one way undermining the influence of the other feature on development of humans. Through genetics, learning, remembering and imitation, culture absorption and expression of instincts is enhanced in the human mind.
