

I don't know what to write about. I repeat. I do ~~not~~ know what to write about. Maybe keep going on that last page. If only it was that easy.

Students are learning many strategies that help them generate ideas to write about. Below are a few strategies your child has learned. When they are useful, suggest some of the following to help them get over their writer's block.

- Make lists of interesting people or significant places, or special moments in your life, like the first time you did something exciting. When you have a free writing day, choose one to write about.
- Start collecting family stories. If you've heard a particular family story again and again, write it down, record it, especially if you're told it by someone's loved one. Write it down. If you're told it by someone's loved one, write it down. If you're told it by someone's loved one, write it down.
- Look around. When you see a writer's block, look at your life, like your favorite toy, a particular book, an old picture, what comes to your mind?

You need an experience. You know you have stories. Catch up with what you have written and you have written it again and again, making it as good as you possibly can.
