

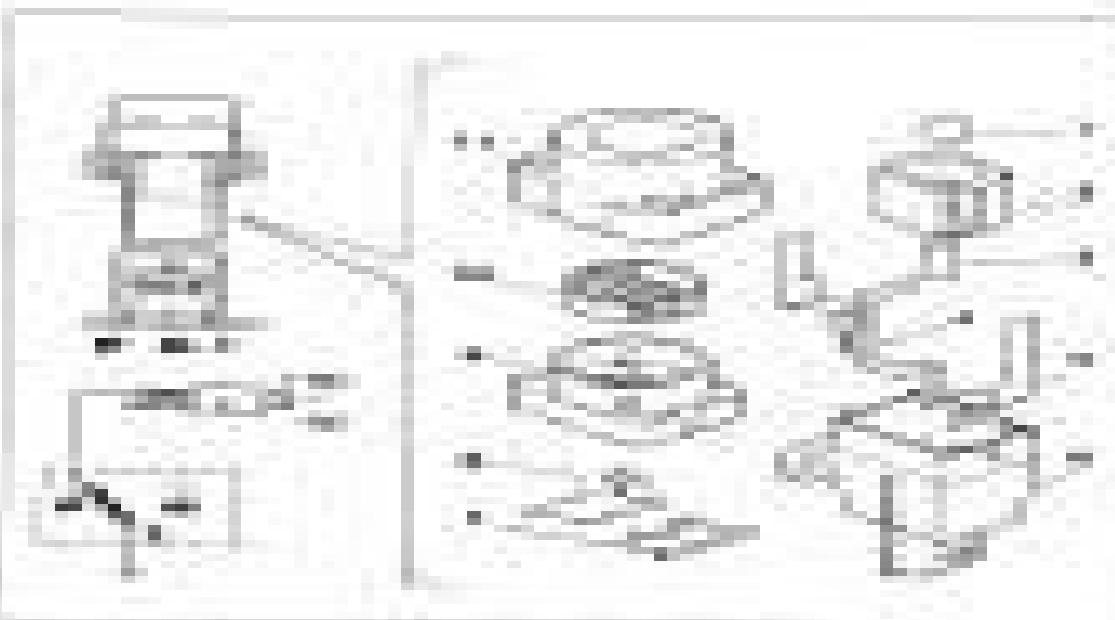

Diagram illustrating the greenhouse effect. Light rays from the sun enter the greenhouse and are reflected back inside, warming the interior.

Greenhouse Effect and Global Warming

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the Sun's rays hit the Earth, some of the energy is reflected back to space, and some is absorbed by the land and oceans. The land and oceans then warm up and radiate heat back to the atmosphere. Greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide and methane, trap some of this heat and prevent it from escaping into space. This process is similar to how a greenhouse works, where the glass panes trap heat inside.

Human activities, such as burning fossil fuels and deforestation, have increased the concentration of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. This has led to a warming of the Earth's surface, which is known as global warming. The effects of global warming include rising sea levels, more frequent and severe weather events, and changes in the distribution of plants and animals.

Scientists are working to understand the greenhouse effect and its impact on the Earth's climate. They are also developing strategies to reduce the amount of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, such as using renewable energy and conserving energy.
