

Overview

Introduction

In a sense, it is the history of management in business, showing how authority, responsibility, resources and control evolved in relation to changes in technology and managerial activities and structures. As with environmental or time and resource interrelationships, management evolved through organizational change, reflecting the changing nature and performance of various systems across the generations of time.

Learning Objectives

After a session in this course, you should also be able to:

- 1. understand management today has emerged from evolutionary changes, including scientific progress, technological innovation and human nature;
- 2. identify the evolutionary stages of management, and describe how technology, organization, structure and environment interact and change over time;
- 3. understand the evolution of management systems in the context of the business environment and other factors;
- 4. understand the changing nature of management organizations over time.

Learning Objectives of this course

The five learning goals that you are encouraged to study and understand in the Introduction to Management

Introduction to Management

Over time, business has evolved from a simple, small-scale operation to a large, complex organization. This is an evolution that has been driven by changes in technology, society, and the environment. As a result, the way we do business has changed significantly, and the challenges we face as managers have also changed.

In this course, you will learn about the history of management, the evolution of management systems, and the challenges we face as managers. You will also learn about the future of management and the role of managers in the future.

Management in the Future

Management in the future will be very different from management today. The challenges we face as managers will be different, and the way we do business will be different. The future of management is uncertain, but it is clear that we will need to adapt to the changes that are coming. We will need to be flexible, creative, and innovative. We will need to be able to lead and inspire others. We will need to be able to manage change. We will need to be able to manage the future.
