A. What is the initial Average fitness of these insects?

Contributions to the Theory of Natural Selection Alfred Russel Wallace, 1871 Wallace noticed on expeditions to the Amazon and the Malay archipelago that mammals in Southeast Asia are more advanced than their Australian cousins His suggestion was that the two continents had split before the better adapted mammals had evolved in Asia The isolated Australian marsupials were able to thrive whilst those in Asia were driven to extinction by competition from more advanced mammals This led to his theory of natural selection which he presented to the Linnean Society in 1858 with Charles Darwin This volume reprints those papers presented to the Linnean Society

The Statistics of Natural Selection on Animal Populations Bryan F. J. Manly, 1985-09-19 In the concluding chapter of his famous book on the theory of evolution by natural selection Charles Darwin 1859 remarked that When the views entertained in this volume on the origin of species or when analogous views are generally admitted we can dimly foresee that there will be a considerable revolution in natural history This proved of course to be completely correct At present there is a great divergence of opinion about the general importance of natural selection in the evolutionary process

Nevertheless biologists are on the whole united in their acceptance of the potential power of selection in changing populations. Given this situation it is not surprising to find that many attempts to detect the effects of natural selection have been made since the time of Darwin. This area of study has been called ecological genetics. It involves the collection of data of various kinds and in many cases the development of special methods for analysing these data. This book is a summary of methods for data analysis concentrating on those that are applicable to animal populations particularly wild populations.
