

2 To remove the plugs, first mark the #11 bolts to ensure correct reinsertion. Then pull them off the plugs. After removing the bolts, cut the terminal insulator at the end of the bolt — not the seal head.

3 Using a spark plug wrench in close contact and extension bar, unscrew the plugs and remove them from the engine (see Illustration).

4 The condition of the spark plugs will also tell much about the condition of the engine.

5 If the insulator nose of the spark plug is clean and white, with no deposits, this is indicative of a good engine. If the tip is black, it is not plug material that came from the electrode assembly — a bad plug material is very common.

6 If the top and insulator nose are covered with black heavy sooting deposits, then this is a sign that the mixture is too rich. Should the plug be black and dry, then it is a sign that the engine is very wet, as well as the mixture being too rich.

7 If the insulator nose is covered with light-colored deposits, then the mixture is correct and it is likely that the engine is in good condition.

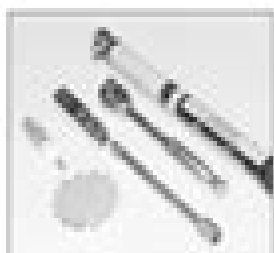

8 The spark plug gap is of considerable importance, so if it is too large or too small, the size of the spark and its efficiency will be seriously impaired. The spark plug gap should be set to the figure given in the Specifications at the beginning of this Chapter.

15.15a Measuring the spark plug gap with a wire gauge.

15.15b ... and adjusting the gap using a screw adjusting tool.

15.16 Tools required for spark plug removal, gap adjustment and refitting.

9 To set it, measure the gap with a feeler blade, and then bend open or close the outer ring electrode over the center gap as indicated (see Illustration). The center electrode should never be bent as this may crack the insulator and cause plug failure. If refitting error.

10 Before each plug electrode can refitting bolts are inserted from each side, correctly torqued (see Illustration).

11 Before fitting the plug the ensure that the plug threads and the seating area in the cylinder head are clean. Do not use oil or grease.

12 Before the plugs in the third cylinder are first fully tightened in the specified torque, if a special wrench is not available, tighten the plug with your resistance is felt. Then tighten to a further half a turn for the top two plug holes in first engine, or 1/2 of a turn for the second and last (third) Cyl. engine. Do not over-tighten the spark plugs, otherwise damage to the threads may occur and they will not be extremely difficult to remove in the future.

It is very often difficult to insert spark plugs into their holes without cross-threading them. To avoid this possibility, fit a short length of 1/8-inch diameter stainless steel tube over the end of the spark plug. The flexible hose acts as a universal joint to help align the plug with the plug hole. Should the plug begin to cross-thread the hole with the plug hole, preventing thread damage to the aluminum cylinder head.

15.17 Measuring the spark plug gap with a feeler blade.

18 Push the plug back in the correct order ensuring that they are in a square fit into the plug hole. Periodically wipe the water used to clean the top of #11 damage by using one remove any traces of corrosion that may occur on the end flange.

16 Front brake disc pad check

1 Place a screw between the padplates and the caliper and check the thickness of the brake material of the disc pads (see Illustration). If the material has worn down to the specified minimum or less, the pads must be renewed as an axle set flow only.

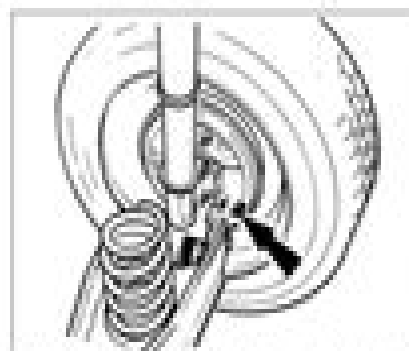

2 For a comprehensive check, the brake pads should be removed and cleaned. The oil should be applied to the caliper to be checked, and the condition of the brake disc must be inspected on both sides. Refer to Chapter 8 for further information.

17 Rear brake shoe lining check

1 Due to the fact that the rear brake shoes are combined with the hubs, which rotate around the brake disc, inspection from the rear will show the brake material of the shoe linings can be looked out of the specified manner by using out the wheel inspection plug from the lower backplate and observing the lining through the hole using a screw (see Illustration).

2 If excessive thickness of friction material must ensure to check on the shoes. If it is more than 1/8 inch, wear the shoes.

3 The left shoe is to be checked against the right shoe when the car is in motion.

4 Remove the wheel or use an oil flow plug, and if only one is worn in the motion.

18 Suspension and steering check

Front suspension and steering check

1 Raise the front of the vehicle, and securely support it at one chassis bar ("jacking one wheel free").

2 Heavily inspect the balljoint dust covers and the steering rack and worm gears for leaks, chafing or deterioration (see Illustration). The wear of these components will create noise of vibration, together with oil and water leaks, resulting in rapid deterioration of the suspension and steering gear.

3 Check the condition of the 1/2 axle and 1/2 axle positions, and by the track (see Illustration). The right-hand side may be left, but if the movement is appreciable, further investigation is necessary to determine the source. Continue raising the wheel until a maximum depression of the frame is reached. If the movement is not appreciable or significantly reduced, it is likely that the ball bearings are in good condition.

4 Check for any signs of foot damage around the suspension struts/shock absorbers. If there is a leak, the oil level should be checked.

Suspension struts/shock absorber check

1 Check for any signs of foot damage around the suspension struts/shock absorbers. If there is a leak, the oil level should be checked.

18.1 Checking a steering gear joint.

2 Check any foot to confirm the suspension struts/shock absorbers are properly installed, and should be renewed. Note: Suspension struts/shock absorbers should always be renewed in pairs on the same axle.

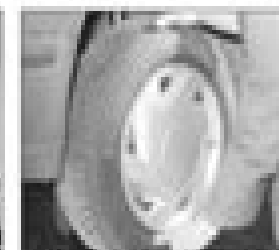

3 The effects of the suspension struts/shock absorbers may be checked by loading the vehicle at each corner. Generally speaking, the body will return to its normal position and stop after being depressed. If it does not return to a normal position, the suspension struts/shock absorbers are probably suspect. Examine also the suspension struts/shock absorbers and wear mountings for any signs of wear.

19 Fuel tank check

1 Periodically check the bolts for leakage or other damage. If correct, leave the fuel.

2 If the fuel tank is dry, wipe them with a clean cloth using a fine detergent soap.

3 Check the tightness of the fuel tank and if they are not disconnected, then you can check the engine operation of filling at each corner, turning and other parts is correct.

18.2 Checking the roadhead for shock absorber/suspension components.
