■ Chenard et al. investigated the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of 100 sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the program significantly improved the men's physical fitness, including their cardiovascular health, muscle strength, and endurance. Additionally, the program also had positive effects on the men's psychological health, reducing their levels of stress and anxiety. The researchers concluded that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged men.
