

Japan Before Modernization

- Before the late 17th century Japan had virtually no contact with industrialized nations.
- They traded with China, Korea, and some Dutch traders from Indonesia, but otherwise they were shut off from the rest of the world.
- Japan was under the rule of Tokugawa shoguns, and they had a strictly ordered society.
- Shoguns distributed land to landlords. Peasants worked for the landlords and were protected by them and their samurai.
- Women were very restricted, their duty was to remain in the home and raise sons.
- Japanese society was very restrictive, but they were prosperous and had a peaceful life.
