2. Would anyone benefit from the rockets and satellites they built?	They would certainly gain access to rockets that were better. They would also have delivery of the atomic bombs directly to the U.S.	They were worried about the fact that the Americans were taking the U.S. knowledge that John F. Kennedy thought it was a danger, planned action that involved all of them (Cuba, the Soviet Union).
3. Would anyone disagree with this?	Not Eisenhower.	He was afraid to make a commitment, but he was also worried.
4. Would the U.S. believe what the Soviets said about rockets and satellites?	Yes, the government had to recognize it was in a weakened position.	Yes, because people were surprised and would not take it as a revelation like the Soviets.

2. What do you think is going on in the following paragraphs?

There (Khrushchev) threatened nuclear war.

Khrushchev asked the Americans to build satellites.

Khrushchev wanted the Americans to build a space rocket.

Naturally we want our children to live and mature in a world at peace, a world in which their talents and those of all other children may fully flower, a world made worthy of children. Substantiating its disclosures with careful documentation, The Game of Death presents an inside account of the atomic bomb drills for school children, their causes and emotional effects. It discusses the shocking and dangerous conditions prevalent in the schools as a result of the armament program and exposes a nationwide plan to indoctrinate children and convert schools into instruments of national policy. It warns of the acclimatization of children through comic books, TV, radio, and motion pictures to concepts of violence, horror, and sudden death. It reports the beginnings of loyalty oaths for parents. Finally, it projects action: Americans must take to protect the welfare and happiness of their children from the dangers that beset them on every side as a consequence of the Cold War.
