

AMERICAN IMPERIALISM

Painting entitled "American Progress"

BACKGROUND

After America was founded in 1777, it quickly expanded starting with the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. This deal made by President Thomas Jefferson doubled the size of the United States. The new land stretched from the city of New Orleans near the Gulf of Mexico in the south to the continental divide of the Rocky Mountains in the north. It included land from the Mississippi River in the east to the Rocky Mountains in the west. After Lewis and Clark explored and mapped the new territory, many settlers started moving out West to new frontier.

Americans quickly began to embrace the idea of Manifest Destiny. This was the concept that the American settlers had the divine right to expand the borders of the United States to the Pacific Ocean and beyond. Advocates of Manifest Destiny typically thought the American people and their institutions were virtuous and they had a mission to spread these institutions. Their goal was to remake the world in the image of the United States as much as possible, and they believed that they were destined by God to do this work. Policies based on Manifest Destiny led to the U.S. acquisition of present-day Oregon, California, Arizona, Nevada, Wyoming, New Mexico, western Colorado, Texas, and Utah. Manifest Destiny was also one concept that drove American imperialism.
