typically have writing centers to which students can bring their writing assignments to a peer tutor for assistance but most high schools and middle schools do not. This book advocates for the creation of writing centers in 7-12 schools and explains why the school library is the best place for the writing center. There is a glaring absence of writing centers in today's K-12 schools. More and more students are being asked in college entrance testing to submit samples of their writing and employers are expecting their workers to write correctly and clearly. This book addresses the critical lack of writing centers below the undergraduate level. It demonstrates how middle school and high school librarians can create writing centers in their school libraries, explains how to assist students through a one-on-one writing tutorial method, and gives students and teachers the tools for learning and understanding the complex art of writing. Author Timothy Horan, inventor of the School Library Writing Center, establishes why school libraries represent the best and most logical places to create writing centers and why school librarians are the natural choice to direct writing center operations. He then takes readers through the process of creating a writing center from original conception up through opening day. Additional topics covered include how to publicize and grow your School Library Writing Center, maintaining your writing center for efficient operation on a daily basis as well as for years to come, how to become an effective writing center director and writing tutor, the most current technology that can be used to assist in the writing composition and research process, and working with English language learner (ELL) students within your writing center.

Intellectual Creativity in First-Year Composition Classes
Heidi Wall Burns, Michael MacBride, 2016-10-12. Today's first-year composition classrooms are largely reflective of the writing pedagogy that has been used for the last 200 years. Unfortunately, this methodology does not meet the research or writing needs of today's college and university students. Burns and MacBride were determined to make their first-year composition courses more relevant to their students and sought a way to revolutionize their syllabus to do so. Building on the work of Tom Romono, Nancy Mack, Camille Allen, Sirpa Grierson, Melinda Putz, and others, Burns and MacBride set out to determine if a multigenre research project could better teach their students research writing and critical thinking skills than a traditional research-based essay. The findings of their semester-long study indicated that not only does a MGRP teach these skills, but it far surpasses a traditional essay in teaching engagement, intellectual creativity, and transferable writing skills. Burns and MacBride demonstrate two different ways to integrate a multigenre research project into the college composition classroom.
