

Accumulating and Assigning Costs to Products

QUESTIONS

- 4-1 The cost of the raw materials entered into production is moved from the raw materials account to the work-in-process inventory account. The cost of manufacturing labor and overhead costs are assigned to production by adding them to the work-in-process inventory account. Overhead costs are assigned (or allocated or apportioned, as described by the cost system, before manufacturing is completed, work is transferred to finished goods inventory, and costs are moved from the work-in-process inventory account to the finished goods inventory account. Finally, when goods are sold, these costs are moved from the finished goods inventory account to cost of goods sold.
- 4-2 Manufacturing organizations face greater challenges in product costing, especially the assignment of overhead costs, than would an service organization do. The latter often looked at manufacturing costing systems to see how they do it, and then product accumulation as they process organizations innovation during manufacturing, as described above in 4-1. In small organizations, growth or purchased value that manufactured the cost of the goods purchased is moved over to account that accumulation the cost of manufacturing inventory in the costs. Some that various overhead costs such as labor, depreciation on the costs, lighting, and heating. The primary focus is on the assignment to the production of production costs or depreciation. Therefore, small organizations like manufacturing organizations, face the issue of how to allocate various overhead costs to themselves, for example, the cost of purchasing and selling products, or depreciation costs.

Service organizations that undertake major projects, such as in a consultancy, focus on determining the cost of a project. In such situations, the major direct cost, negligible part, is when a large proportion of the project's cost. The organization will then assign various overhead costs to determine project profitability.
