Congressional Record , Draftee Division John Sloan Brown,2014-07-15 The involuntary soldiers of an unmilitary people such were the forces that American military planners had to pit against hardened Axis veterans yet prewar unpreparedness dictated that whole divisions of such men would go to war under the supervision of tiny professional cadres Much to his surprise and delight Army Chief of Staff General George C Marshall found that the 88th Infantry Division his first draftee division fought like wildcats and readily outclassed its German adversaries while measuring up to the best Regular Army divisions Draftee Division is at once a history of the 88th Division an analysis of American unit mobilization during World War II and an insight into the savage Italian Campaign After an introduction placing the division in historical context separate chapters address personnel training logistics and overseas deployment Another chapter focuses upon preliminary adjustments to the realities of combat after which two chapters trace the 88th's climactic drive through the Gustav Line into Rome itself A final chapter takes the veteran 88th to final victory Of particular interest are observations concerning differences connected with mobilization between the 88th and less successful divisions and discussions of the contemporary relevance of the 88th's experiences Drafter Division is especially rich in its sources John Sloan Brown with close ties to the division has secured extensive and candid contributions from veterans To these he has added a full array of archival and secondary sources The result is a definitive study of American cadremen creating a division out of raw draftees and leading them on to creditable victories Its findings will be important for military and social historians and for students of defense policy

Indigenous Women, Work, and History Mary Jane Logan McCallum, 2014-05-02 When dealing with Indigenous women's history we are conditioned to think about women as private sphere figures circumscribed by the home the reserve and the community Moreover in many ways Indigenous men and women have been cast in static pre modern and one dimensional identities and their twentieth century experiences reduced to a singular story of decline and loss In Indigenous Women Work and History historian Mary Jane Logan McCallum rejects both of these long standing conventions by presenting case studies of Indigenous domestic servants hairdressers community health representatives and nurses working in modern Native ways between 1940 and 1980 Based on a range of sources including the records of the Departments of Indian Affairs and National Health and Welfare interviews and print and audio visual media McCallum shows how state run education and placement programs were part of Canada's larger vision of assimilation and extinguishment of treaty obligations Conversely she also shows how Indigenous women link these same programs to their social and cultural responsibilities of community building and state resistance By placing the history of these modern workers within a broader historical context of Aboriginal education and health federal labour programs post war Aboriginal economic and political developments and Aboriginal professional organizations McCallum challenges us to think about Indigenous women's history in entirely new ways
