The process of inkjet printing is very complicated and the ink used must meet certain chemical and physicochemical requirements including those related to storage stability jetting performance color management wetting and adhesion on substrates Obviously these requirements which represent different scientific disciplines such as colloid chemistry chemical engineering and physics indicate the need for an interdisciplinary book that will cover all aspects of making and utilizing inkjet inks This book provides basic and essential information on the important parameters which determine ink performance It covers not only the conventional use of inkjet technology on graphic applications but also the extension of this method to print various functional materials such as the use of conductive inks to print light emitting diodes LEDs and three dimensional structures Thus the book will serve a large community industrial chemists who deal with ink formulations and synthesis of chemicals for inks chemical engineers and physicists who deal with the rheological and flow properties of inks and researchers in academic institutes who seek to develop novel applications based on inkjet printing of new materials Who's who in the South and Southwest, 1993
