

Macaulay Honors Essay 1

If Marcus Aurelius was correct in observing that “A man’s worth is no greater than the worth of his ambitions”, then I could say that chubby little 5th-grade me was worth a donut. The promise came from my 5th grade ELA teacher Mrs. Costello. Whoever had the most yellow stars on the bright blue reading chart would get to go on a Dunkin Donuts date with her. This promise would eventually spark an interest in reading within me that no other person, place, or thing could have inspired.

As soon as I sniffed the word food out of Mrs. Costello’s mouth, I ran to the Pelham Public library behind P.S.71 with my “ama,” ushering her to speed up as we waited to pick up my little brother from school. I grabbed all the Geronimo Stilton, Harry Potter, and Percy Jackson books I could find. Sometimes I would be upset when my mother tried to sneakily stow away the 39 Clues books into our one-dollar red NYC public library bag when sequels of my favorite books were not present on the bookshelves. Even so, it all resulted in the most cherishing and heartfelt experience in my little world: reading at home.

Under the labyrinth of my heavy-furred “kambala”, I immersed myself in hundreds of chapters. In a span of mere moments, I was transported. There were breathtaking, vivid imaginative moments as I journeyed through “Harry Potter and the Chambers of Secrets”, witnessing the climax unfold as Harry slayed Tom Riddle’s basilisk with the sword of Godric Gryffindor, and with the help of Dumbledore’s phoenix, Fawkes.

Conversely, there were startling moments like in “Percy Jackson and the Sea of Monsters” when a black manticore suddenly pierces Annabeth in the chest as they finally defeat the threat of the titans and she utters her last words as deep crimson-colored blood seeps through her clothes. Then, just as it seems all hope is lost, Rick Riordan unexpectedly brings Annabeth back to life through the golden fleece. The effect was to play with my vulnerable feelings over the death of one of my favorite characters.

My books became an escape from the reality of the commonly strict south Asian household where you had to work constantly and spend hours in Saturday school. It provided me with a sense of joy as I would read the end of a book where the book blurb lay. My vocabulary expanded and improved my school reading comprehension.

When friends today need to start a conversation or colleagues ask me what my after-school hobbies are, the first thing that comes out of my mouth is reading. I’m sometimes met with laughter as it is not the common interest of many, and other times with awe as it

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1919 edition. Excerpt: But whatever he expected he certainly got nothing. Miss Burney had been hired for board lodging and two hundred a year. Board lodging and two hundred a year she had duly received. We have looked carefully through the Diary in the hope of finding some trace of those extraordinary benefactions on which the Doctor reckoned. But we can discover only a promise never performed of a gown and for this promise Miss Burney was expected to return thanks such as might have suited the beggar with whom Saint Martin in the legend divided his cloak. The experience of four years was however insufficient to dispel the illusion which had taken possession of the Doctor's mind and between the dear father and the sweet Queen there seemed to be little doubt that some day or other Frances would drop down a corpse. Six months had elapsed since the interview between the parent and the daughter. The resignation was not sent in. The sufferer grew worse and worse. She took bark but it soon ceased to produce a beneficial effect. She was stimulated with wine she was soothed with opium but in vain. Her breath began to fail. The whisper that she was in a decline spread through the Court. The pains in her side became so severe that she was forced to crawl from the card table of the old Fury to whom she was tethered three or four times in an evening for the purpose of taking hartshorn. Had she been a negro slave a humane planter would have excused her from work. But her Majesty showed no mercy. Thrice a day the accursed bell still rang. The Queen was still to be dressed for the morning at seven and to be dressed for the day at noon 30 and to be undressed at midnight. But there had arisen in literary and fashionable society a general
