Human Body Organs

Kidneys

Kidneys are the body's natural filters. They regulate the balance of fluids and waste in the body. They are located in the back of the body, one on each side of the spine. They are responsible for filtering out toxins and excess fluids from the blood. They also produce hormones that help regulate blood pressure and red blood cell production.

Stomach

Stomach is a muscular organ that is part of the digestive system. It is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces that can be absorbed by the body. The stomach also produces stomach acid, which helps to break down food and kill bacteria. The stomach is located in the upper abdomen, just below the diaphragm.

Small Intestine

Small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is part of the digestive system. It is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food that we eat. The small intestine is located in the lower abdomen, just below the stomach. It is about 6 meters long and is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum.

Large Intestine

Large intestine is a long, coiled tube that is part of the digestive system. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the food that we eat. The large intestine is located in the lower abdomen, just below the small intestine. It is about 1.5 meters long and is divided into three parts: the cecum, the colon, and the rectum.

Heart

Hearth is a muscular organ that is part of the circulatory system. It is responsible for pumping blood throughout the body. The heart is located in the chest, between the lungs. It is about the size of a fist and is divided into four chambers: the right atrium, the right ventricle, the left atrium, and the left ventricle.

Liver

Liver is a large, reddish-brown organ that is part of the digestive system. It is responsible for filtering toxins from the blood and producing bile, which is used to digest food. The liver is located in the upper abdomen, just below the diaphragm. It is about the size of a football and is divided into two main lobes.

Lungs

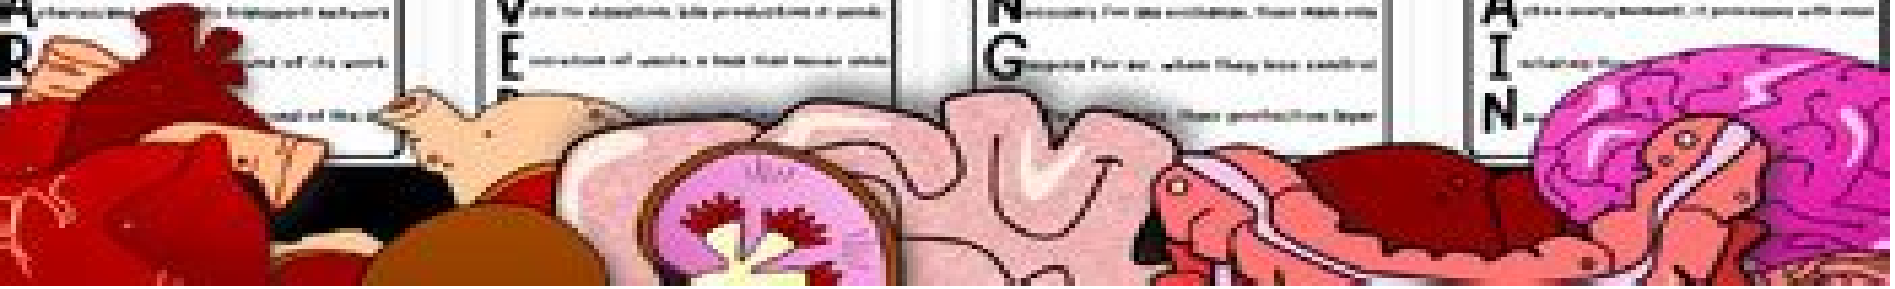

Lungs are a pair of organs that are part of the respiratory system. They are responsible for taking in oxygen from the air and expelling carbon dioxide from the body. The lungs are located in the chest, on either side of the heart. They are about the size of a pair of boxing gloves and are covered in a thin layer of moist tissue called the pleura.

Brain

Brain is a complex organ that is part of the nervous system. It is responsible for controlling all the functions of the body, from movement to thought. The brain is located in the head, protected by the skull and the meninges. It is about the size of a walnut and is divided into three main parts: the cerebrum, the cerebellum, and the brainstem.
