

5. Observing class members shared a classroom during conference and participants received the book and their reflections were incorporated in the design/development of the curriculum. Thus, the initial, ongoing consultation process of this project, which began a month before the conference, clearly was a critical component of the process. Participants have been asked to describe the degree of difficulty meeting participants' needs (see appendix B).

5. Subscribers' great expectations contribute very differently. Subscribers' perceptions about customers' great expectations, how those expectations change over time, and the consequences of unmet great expectations, are all unique experiences. One may believe that a great customer experience is a timeless phenomenon regardless of customer segments or the generation of the customer. Other generations may have different experiences, however, that have shaped their own engagement towards the brand. Many are not looking for a seamless customer experience, but are experiencing different aspects of customerhood such as the time spent.

8. Journal Quarterly (Chicago) is a literary-religious journal that, "drawing to the forefront of the scene," the literary and religious life of the nation and the world, publishes and publishes important religious and literary works. The authorship is by its members and its contributors.

5. Please explain how the model approach is being applied to the development of the technology, as the case requires.

18. "When one is the subject of two different tests, the 10-year-old's tendency to give only correct answers without further thought is," White again cautions, "based in part on their immature understanding of the nature of the broader situation. Younger children often have a more limited understanding of the nature of the experiment's goals and control and the experimenter's position and intent. They often believe the subject is aware of the solution, the one who is not asked to test their thinking process. This greater insight into their own abilities and reasoning is not sufficient to lead them to give their 10-year-old's answer, but, rather, they follow the experimenter's direction." (White, 1998, p. 100)
