Land Degradation and Desertification: Assessment, Mitigation and Remediation Pandi Zdruli, Marcello Pagliai, Selim Kapur, Angel Faz Cano, 2010-07-20 Land Degradation and Desertification Assessment Mitigation and Remediation reports research results in sustainable land management and land degradation status and mitigation in 36 countries around the world. It includes background papers with continental and international perspectives dealing with land degradation and desertification studies. The book assembles various topics of interest for a large audience. They include carbon sequestration and stocks, modern techniques to trace the trends of land degradation, traditional and modern approaches of resource base conservation, soil fertility management, reforestation, rangeland rehabilitation, land use planning, GIS techniques in desertification risk cartography, participatory ecosystem management, policy analyses and possible plans for action. Various climatic domains in Africa, Asia, Europe, and The Americas are covered. The book will be of interest to a variety of environmental scientists, agronomists, national and international policy makers, and a number of organizations dealing with sustainable management of natural resources.

Land Degradation and Desertification Abiud Kaswamila, 2016-10-26 Land degradation, which is caused by multiple forces, extreme weather conditions, and anthropogenic activities that pollute or degrade the quality of soils and land utility, negatively affects food production, livelihoods, and the provision of other ecosystem goods and services. Land degradation can also lead to climate change and affect human health. The problem is more pronounced in least developing countries due to overdependence of natural resources for survival. Sustainable ways to reduce land degradation and desertification demand research and advocacy of sustainable land management practices. This book is organized into two sections. The first section covers three major aspects: viz. an understanding of patterns of land degradation and desertification for developing mitigation strategies, land-atmosphere interaction, and response of land cover to climate change effects of Karst, rocky desertification, and the effect of unprecedented human activity on land degradation and desertification processes using natural and human-induced landscape research. The last section dwells on the relationship between soil degradation and crop production and an examination on how land degradation impacts the quality of soil in communal rangelands. Environmentalists, land use planners, ecologists, pedologists, researchers, and graduate students will find this book to be an essential resource.

Land Degradation in India Ratan Priya, 2021-03-19 This book discusses land degradation in India using statistical tools such as Principal Component Analysis (PCA) and Regression Analysis (RA) and uses statistical analyses and graphical representations of the causal relationship between land degradation and land productivity to determine linkages with deforestation, climate change, and agricultural productivity. While most studies of land degradation in India focus on economic outcomes and physical processes at macro and micro levels, this study addresses land degradation at the meso level to fill in this gap and provide up-to-date information on often overlooked factors associated with land degradation issues using the latest available data. Districts in the study were selected by land degradation intensity.

forming an index of the severity of land degradation in the area with a focus on gullied lands soil salinity alkalinity and open and dense scrubs as indicators Though the study areas are in India researchers policy makers and students around the world will be able to learn from these inputs regarding land degradation to address various challenges associated with sustainable land management and agricultural productivity

Combating Desertification Land Degradation and Climate Change: Management of Dry Lands T.S. Chouhan,2018-06-01 Although much is known about the processes and effects of desertification land degradation and climate change little is understood about the links between them Less still is known about how these processes are likely to interact in different social ecological systems around the world or how societies might be able to adapt to this twin challenge This book identifies key vulnerabilities to the combined effects of climate change and land degradation around the world It identifies triple win adaptations that can tackle both climate change and land degradation whilst supporting biodiversity and ecosystem services Desertification Land Degradation and Climate Change Assessment Mitigation and Remediation research results in sustainable land management land degradation status and mitigation in the world It includes background chapters with continental and international perspectives dealing with desertification land degradation and climate change studies The book assembles various topics of interest for a large audience They include carbon sequestration and stocks modern techniques to trace the trends of land degradation traditional and modern approaches of resource base conservation soil fertility management reforestation rangeland rehabilitation land use planning GIS techniques in desertification risk cartography participatory ecosystem management policy analyses and possible plans for action Various climatic domains in Africa Asia Europe and the Americas are covered The book will be of interest to a variety of environmental scientists agronomists national and international policy makers and a number of organizations dealing with sustainable management of natural resources

Land Use Planning for Natural Hazards George D. Bathrellos,Hariklia D. Skilodimou,2021-01-06 Natural hazard events are able to significantly affect the natural and artificial environment In this context changes in landforms due to natural disasters have the potential to affect and in some cases even restrict human interaction with the ecosystem In order to minimize fatalities and reduce the economic impact that accompanies their occurrence proper planning is crucial Land use planning can play an important role in reducing current and future risks related to natural hazards Land use changes can lead to natural hazards and vice versa natural hazards affect land uses Therefore planners may take into account areas that are susceptible to natural hazards when selecting favorable locations for land use development Appropriate land use planning can lead to the determination of safe and non safe areas for urban activities This Special Issue focuses on land use planning for natural hazards In this context various types of natural hazards such as land degradation and desertification coastal hazard floods and landslides as well as their interactions with human activities are presented

Developments in Soil Classification, Land Use Planning and Policy Implications Shabbir A. Shahid,Faisal K. Taha,Mahmoud A. Abdelfattah,2013-02-15 As the world s population continues to expand maintaining and indeed increasing agricultural productivity is more important than ever though it is also more difficult than ever in the face of changing weather patterns that in some cases are leading to aridity and desertification The absence of scientific soil inventories especially in arid areas leads to mistaken decisions about soil use that in the end reduce a region s capacity to feed its population or to guarantee a clean water supply Greater efficiency in soil use is possible when these resources are properly classified using international standards Focusing on arid regions this volume details soil classification from many countries It is only once this information is properly assimilated by policymakers it becomes a foundation for informed decisions in land use planning for rational and sustainable uses
