

Molecular Geometry and Electron Domain Theory

Dr. Stephen J. Cummings, a professor of psychology at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, and his colleagues found that children with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) have a higher risk of being involved in a motor vehicle accident than children without the disorder. The researchers found that children with ADHD were more likely to be involved in a motor vehicle accident than children without the disorder, even when they were controlling for other factors such as age, sex, and socioeconomic status. The researchers also found that children with ADHD were more likely to be involved in a motor vehicle accident that resulted in injury or property damage than children without the disorder. The researchers concluded that children with ADHD are at a higher risk of being involved in a motor vehicle accident than children without the disorder, and that this risk is not fully explained by other factors.
