The more familiar you are with the information it contains, the easier you will find it to install, operate, and maintain your smoke alarm properly, which ultimately means greater security and peace of mind for you and your family.

Smoke Alarm Advantages

Fire protection type alarms are generally more effective at detecting fire, warning you when a fire starts, and alerting you to evacuate your home. Alarms of most types include thermate (heat) or ionization (smoke) sensors. The photoelectric type alarm is generally more effective at detecting fires, including fires that smolder for hours before burning into flames. Sensors of these two types include separate sensing elements for smoking. However, both types of alarm are designed to provide adequate detection of both types of fires. If you have the ionization-type system, you should install smoke alarm that contains an ionization (I) photoelectric and ionization sensing technology.
