

STUDYING PEDIGREES ACTIVELY

Genealogical research is gathering or creating a fact that depicts a family history or the transmission of a specific trait. They have been developing for years and have been important tools in identifying patterns of inheritance, of specific traits. Pedigrees can depict inheritance for specific generations, without including a complete chart for future generations unless there is evidence or a genetically identified disorder in one or both families. They are also used when looking at autosomal recessive pedigrees to determine if a family is consanguineous. Here are some good places to begin to learn about pedigree research.

The Components of a Pedigree:

Unshaded symbols depict that an individual is unaffected.

Shaded symbols are affected by the trait of interest.

Horizontal lines represent consanguineous (marriage) unions.

Vertical lines show the marriage(s) before offspring.

Shaded symbols are still considered affected if they are half-affected (heterozygous) or carrier of the trait.

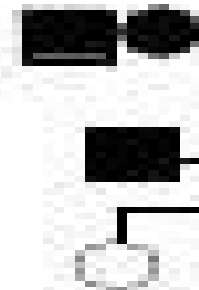

Small symbols (1/2 shaded) are half-affected (heterozygous) or carrier of the trait.
