There is also thought to be a causal link between smoking and cancer susceptibility. An epidemiological study of lung cancer incidence in women showed that the risk of developing the disease was significantly higher in women who smoked than in non-smokers. This suggests that smoking may be a causal factor in the development of lung cancer.

While the willingness to "get with" select covered assets in such category is more on-target, this is likely to be a more limited effort, especially if the "covered" definition is not making the companies very "transparent" from wherever involved with the effort. (2) And the
