1. Introduction

Fashion trends come and go; meanwhile a society's values are established and evolving characteristic to their beliefs and culture. Fashion is just not an ambitious projected image of a reinterpreted good old value to fulfill some function or agenda alike but rather a evocative and refreshing concept worthy enough to be portrayed for society's appreciation that makes us even more instinctive. In the society, the individual's appearance is the ticket to transmit non verbal communication signals such as possible cues about his / her social stature, values and lifestyle. Fashion communication has under gone a 360 degree shift in its communicable aspects staring from projecting a basic image of how we look like and how we feel like to expressing our emotional experiences through interactive implements in the dress.

The success of the fashion trend lies in the way the society interprets the fashion trend and judges it. Hence the impact is measured by the barometer of social acceptance which in turn is driven by the several motivational forces that underline the people's values and behavioral traits. Today's consumer culture is driven by aspirationalism that diminishes the gap between the rich and economically volatile sections when it comes to accepting and adopting a trend. A classical example is, a consumer in China saves her three months salary to purchase a LVMH hand bag. Further It does not stop here as the people's cash liquidity is extended by the easy provision of personal loans facilitated by both private and nationalized banks alike. This is even extended by few Brands' initiatives to offer fashion products on a credit basis with easy monthly part payment options.
