luminous and intimate novel about the weight of inheritance the bonds of loyalty and the awakening of love set against the backdrop of a changing Malaysia The South unfolds during a visit by the Lim family to their rural clan estate after a long absence Jay in his mid teens and his two older sisters are less than thrilled to leave their city for the remote house in the south but their parents Sui Ching and Jack are adamant Jay finds he s expected to share a room with Chuan the son of the estate s overseer a bit older than Jay but seemingly much more mature and capable in the world The two soon form an intense bond but with their very different backgrounds and even more disparate expectations for the future the course of their relationship is always an unspoken question Meanwhile change presses in including the destruction of the farm s beloved orchards and the sale of the estate is mooted The relationships between Chuan s father and Jack and Sui Ching go deep but pressures both internal and external threaten to sever old bonds and upend an entire way of life The South at once sweeping and intimate is a masterful portrait of a family navigating a period of great transformation
