

HISTORY TERM 3 GRADE 8 SUMMARY

Topic 7 The Rush for Africa: The Late 19th Century

Unit 1 European colonisation of Africa in the late 19th century

Colonization occurs when one country takes over and governs another country for its own benefit.

The colonization of Africa was part of a global colonization process that affected all the continents of the world.

Africa before European colonization.

1. After the earliest days of European exploration, European states overcame the wealth of land on other continents, sent settlers there, and exploited them
2. "Rush for Africa" during the late 19th and early 20th centuries was part of the process.
3. In the 400 years before the Rush for Africa began, European nations limited their involvement primarily to setting up trading posts along the coast of Africa and acquiring slaves.
4. Africans traded directly with Europeans before 1500.
5. Few travellers from Europe travelled inland, referring to Africa as the "dark continent" because they knew so little about Africa.

Pre-colonial Africa had as many as 10.000 different states, with a variety of political dispensations and forms of government:

1. small family groups of hunter-gatherers, the San of Southern Africa
2. larger, more structured groups such as the family clan groupings of the Bantu-speaking people of central and southern Africa
3. strongly structured tribal groupings in the Horn of Africa
4. the great Sahel kingdoms
5. independent city-states and kingdoms such as those of the Akan, Yoruba, and Igbo peoples of West Africa, the Swahili trading coastal towns of East Africa, and the Mali and Ashanti kingdoms of West Africa.

The pre-colonial societies had legal systems, the gathering had rules, laws, and traditions that dictated how the people were to live together in peace.

Centralized kingdoms and empires

Of African societies, large empires were ruled by kings with almost absolute power over their subjects; they made decisions without the opinion of those over whom they ruled, and could more or less do whatever they wanted.

1. ancient Egypt in North Africa
2. Nubia and Aksum in Northeast Africa
3. Ghana, Mali and Songhai in West Africa
4. Zimbabwe in southern Africa
