

The topic of cultural diffusion is planned to be explored in the research paper by examining the diffusion of American culture within the processes of globalization and Americanization. The relevance of the identified issues is validated by the increasing level of expansion of American popular culture, business-related concepts, and lifestyle approaches that influence other nations through globalization. The argumentative essay will claim that the process of cultural diffusion in the form of global Americanization adversely impacts local cultures by devaluing national identity and diminishing cultural diversity.

The primary outside source that provides evidence for the argument is a recent book entitled Globalization and American Popular Culture written by Lane Crothers, a professor of politics and government at the Illinois State University. This source provides an in-depth analysis of the modern tendencies in the global diffusion of American culture as they impact the lives of people abroad.

The potential counterarguments to possible objections pertaining to the positive developmental triggers Americanization provide through globalization are as follows. Firstly, development in different spheres of national functioning might be achieved without damage to cultural identity but through adaptation of ideas while preserving the uniqueness of the local culture. Secondly, the enforced and encouraged acceptance of the diffusional influences of Americanization might lead to the increase of nationalist movements for purifying national identities, which is a dangerous outcome that should be avoided.

Introduction

The USA has significantly influenced and shaped the cultural domains of many countries of the world, primarily in the spheres of popular culture, business, consumerism, technologies, and daily activities. The Western or American culture is a product of a capitalist and neoliberal mindset that translates to all aspects of life and tends to dominate the world within the context of globalization. The overall development of industries and technologies allows people to travel more easily and to engage in communicative contacts using the Internet with people from various countries and environments. Such a process of cultural
