

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM

Endocrine System: WORKING TOGETHER

Each organ system works on other systems within the body to do its "job". Our bodies learn just some of the ways that the endocrine system interacts with other organ systems.

Nervous System

Circulatory System

Endocrine System: FACTS

Endocrine System: PROBLEMS

Most of the time, the endocrine system works perfectly well. However, sometimes problems can arise.

Diabetes

Diabetes is a condition that causes high blood glucose (sugar) levels. It is caused by the body being unable to either produce or use the hormone insulin. So, the glucose in the blood gets stuck or "stuck". Symptoms include increased thirst, weight gain, changes in vision, frequent urination, increased hunger, mood swings, and changes in the body.

Endocrine System: KEY TERMS

Term	Definition
Endocrine System	Network of endocrine glands that make, store, and release hormones.
Hormones	Chemical messengers that carry information and instructions from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: HORMONES

Hormones are chemical signals. Hormones are released by a gland and travel in the blood to a target cell. When it gets there, it tells the target cell to do something. Hormones can be thought of as messengers that carry information from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: FIGHT-OR-FLIGHT

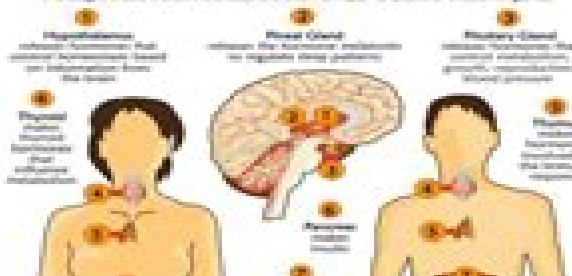

The fight-or-flight response is a reaction that occurs in the body when we are really frightened. The brain (fight-or-flight) recognizes the situation that our present situation had no danger. The brain sends signals to the endocrine system. They send out hormones that tell the body to get ready to fight or run away. The fight-or-flight response is triggered by the release of hormones that prepare the body to either stay and fight with a danger or to run away from it. In either case, the body's response to stress prepares us to deal with the danger.

Today, we do not usually have to fight or run away from a danger as our ancestors might. However, our bodies still react in the same way when we sense danger as that only way. The diagram shows the hormones that are released and the effect that they have on the body.

Endocrine System: GLANDS

A gland is a structure that produces and releases substances that perform a specific function in the body. There are two types of glands: exocrine glands and endocrine glands. Exocrine glands release their products into a duct that leads out of the body. Endocrine glands release their products into the bloodstream. Exocrine glands include sweat glands, salivary glands, and the digestive system. Endocrine glands include the thyroid, pituitary, and adrenal glands. The diagram below shows the location and the main function of endocrine glands.

Endocrine System: FEEDBACK LOOPS

Endocrine activities are regulated by complex feedback loops. These feedback loops help the body maintain a balance. When it gets out of balance, the body sends out signals to bring it back to normal. When it gets too cold, the body sends out signals to make the body warm. When it gets too hot, the body sends out signals to make the body cool. The diagram below shows the feedback loops that regulate the endocrine system.

The glands react to hormonal changes in the blood in the same way. The glands only release hormones when the blood has too much of a hormone. The glands only release hormones when the blood has too little of a hormone. The glands only release hormones when the blood has too much of a hormone. The glands only release hormones when the blood has too little of a hormone. The diagram below shows the feedback loops that regulate the endocrine system.
