Figure 7. Scatter plot showing the relationship between the number of days spent in hospital and the number of days spent in nursing home. The x-axis represents the number of days spent in hospital, ranging from 0 to 60. The y-axis represents the number of days spent in nursing home, ranging from 0 to 60. A positive correlation is evident, with most data points clustered below 20 days in both settings. There are several outliers with higher values, particularly around 40-50 days in hospital and 20-40 days in nursing home.

These two equations define the addition of two operators as well as the multiplication of two operators – a useful mathematical device to formalise the relationship between two operators. The second equation is commutative – a change in the order of the operators does not change the product – as you might expect from the fact that the order of the two operators does not affect the result. The first equation is associative – a change in the order of the operators does not affect the result. This is a useful mathematical device to formalise the relationship between two operators. The second equation is commutative – a change in the order of the operators does not affect the result. This is a useful mathematical device to formalise the relationship between two operators.
