Learning to Drive David

Michael Stavens, 2011 Every year 1.2 million people die in automobile accidents and up to 50 million are injured. Many of these deaths are due to driver error and other preventable causes. Autonomous or highly aware cars have the potential to positively impact tens of millions of people. Building an autonomous car is not easy. Although the absolute number of traffic fatalities is tragically large, the failure rate of human driving is actually very small. A human driver makes a fatal mistake once in about 88 million miles. As a co-founding member of the Stanford Racing Team, we have built several relevant prototypes of autonomous cars. These include Stanley, the winner of the 2005 DARPA Grand Challenge, and Junior, the car that took second place in the 2007 Urban Challenge. These prototypes demonstrate that autonomous vehicles can be successful in challenging environments. Nevertheless, reliable, cost-effective perception under uncertainty is a major challenge to the deployment of robotic cars in practice. This dissertation presents selected perception technologies for autonomous driving in the context of Stanford's autonomous cars. We consider speed selection in response to terrain conditions, smooth road finding, improved visual feature optimization, and cost-effective car detection. Our work does not rely on manual engineering or even supervised machine learning. Rather, the car learns on its own, training itself without human teaching or labeling. We show that this self-supervised learning often meets or exceeds traditional methods. Furthermore, we feel self-supervised learning is the only approach with the potential to provide the very low failure rates necessary to improve on human driving performance.

Learning to Drive Colin J. Carroll, 2014-06-09 Parents surprise a number of professional driving instructors with their approach to teaching a new driver how to drive. Driving is a life: firstly, we learn about the vehicle controls; then the manoeuvring procedures; followed by the more complex on-road procedures through to the open road and traffic speed processes. By following this book in page order, a new driver will develop these skills progressively and be introduced to the tougher tasks as a combination of earlier learned skills. By including drawings and basic descriptions, the book can be shared, read by the facilitator and the new driver to assist in the learning process. Learning and Behavior James E. Mazur, 2015-07-17 This book reviews how people and animals learn and how their behaviors are later changed as a result of this learning. Nearly all of our behaviors are influenced by prior learning experiences in some way. This book describes some of the most important principles, theories, controversies, and experiments that pertain to learning and behavior that are applicable to many different species and many different learning situations. Many real-world examples and analogies make the concepts and theories more concrete and relevant to the students. In addition, most of the chapters include sections that describe how the theories and principles have been used in the applied field of behavior modification. Each chapter in the seventh edition was updated with new studies and new references that reflect recent developments in the field. The book includes a number of learning aids for students, including a list of learning objectives at the beginning of each chapter, practices, quizzes, and review questions, and a glossary for all important terms. Learning Behavior covers topics such as classical and operant conditioning, reinforcement schedules, avoidance, and punishment, stimulus control, comparative cognition observational learning motor skill learning and choice Both the classic studies and the most recent developments and trends in the field are explored Although the behavioral approach is emphasized many cognitive theories are covered as well along with a chapter on comparative cognition Upon completing this book readers will be able to understand the field of learning and discuss real world applications of learning principles Rookie Teaching For Dummies W.
