Medical Ethics, Duties & Medical Negligence Awareness among the Practitioners in a Teaching Medical College, Hospital-A Survey

*Dr. Shreemanta Kumar Dash

Abstract

There is Growing public awareness regarding the ethical conduct of medical practitioners, and complaints against physicians appear to be escalating. The changing doctor-patient relationship and commercialization of modern medical practice has affected the practice of medicine.

This study aimed to assess the knowledge of, and attitudes to, medical ethics among doctors in the Kalinga Institute of Medical Sciences (KIMS), Bhubaneswar, Orissa. A self-administered structured questionnaire was distributed to all doctors; a total 120 numbers of practitioners of various clinical departments participated. 90% of the total participants were well aware about medico legal cases. All the participants advocated for an ethical practice but 12% of them practice as per the demand of the situation. 68% of the participants expressed that dichotomy should not be a part of medical practice. Only 52% of the respondents are aware of the MCI code of medical ethics 2002 and 57% knows the role of ethical committee in their institute. Majority, 88% of them expressed that 15 days duty in the department of Forensic Medicine should be mandatory during internship to handle the medico legal cases properly.

Key Words: Medical Ethics, Negligence, Medico Legal Cases

Introduction:

Multiple factors - the increasing use of technology, paradigm shifts in patients' attitudes to doctors (and vice versa!), consumerism, litigation, and so on - have resulted in making the law an integral aspect of healthcare today. [1] Legal and ethical aspects of healthcare address some of these new issues. In medicine, professionalism connotes not only knowledge and skills, but also character, especially compassion and ethics. [2]

There is Growing public awareness regarding the ethical conduct of medical practitioners, and complaints against physicians appear to be escalating. The changing doctor-patient relationship and commercialization of modern medical practice has affected the practice of medicine. Patient suspects negligence as a cause of their suffering. There is an increasing trend of medical litigation by unsatisfied patients.

The recent increase in litigation against doctors is an issue of immediate concern. [3] The reasons for these are social, economic, professional and judicial. Social factors include increasing media awareness about medical facts and fallacies, professional accountability, and rights of patients in terms of information, decision-making and assessing outcomes. Negative publicity in the media about the profession has done further damage. Moreover, doctor-patient confrontations have been increasing in the recent past.

Doctors should familiarize themselves with the regulations and laws that concern their practice. Doctors have several ethical, moral and legal obligations in their duties. It is therefore very important that every doctor understands the nature of these obligations and then fulfills these obligations to the best of their ability. [4]

Why this study?

Ignorance of law is no excuse for violating it. It is duty of everyone to know the law which concerns him or her. Nowadays practicing medicine is hazardous & risky. Mutual faith replaced with mutual suspicion. This study was taken up to assess the knowledge and practice of medical ethics and professionalism among doctors working in Kalinga Institute of Medical Sciences (KIMS), Bhubaneswar, Orissa.
