Hot Cracking Phenomena in Welds II

Thomas Böllinghaus, Horst Herold, Carl E. Cross, J C Lippold, 2008-08-07 Failure of welded components can occur during service as well as during fabrication Most common analyses of the resistance of welded components against failure are targeted at crack avoidance Such evaluations are increasingly carried out by modern weldability studies i e considering interactions between the selected base and filler materials structural design and welding process Such weldability investigations are particularly targeted to prevent hot cracking as one of the most common cracking phenomena occurring during weld fabrication To provide an international information and discussion platform to combat hot cracking an international workshop on Hot Cracking Phenomena in Welds has been created based on an initiative of the Institute for Materials and Joining Technology at the Otto von Guericke University in Magdeburg and the Division V 5 Safety of Joined Components at the Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing BAM in Berlin Germany The first workshop was organized in Berlin under the topics mechanisms and phenomena metallurgy and materials modelling and simulations as well as testing and standardization It consisted of 20 individual contributions from eight countries which were compiled in a book that found a very ready market not only in the welding community As a consequence of increasing interest it has been decided to establish the Workshop on Hot Cracking Phenomena in Welds as a regular event every three years embedded in the International Institute of Welding IIW Attached to the IIW Commission IX and II Spring intermediate meetings the second workshop was organized in March 2007

Thermomechanical Processing of Steels Jose M. Rodriguez-Ibabe,Pello Uranga,2020-11-18 This book gathers a collection of papers summarizing some of the latest developments in the thermomechanical processing of steels. The replacement of conventional rolling plus post rolling heat treatments by integrated controlled forming and cooling strategies implies important reductions in energy consumption, increases in productivity and more compact facilities in the steel industry. The metallurgical challenges that this integration implies though are relevant and impressive developments that have been achieved over the last 40 years. The frequency of the development of new steel grades and processing technologies devoted to thermomechanically processed products is increasing and their implementation is being expended to higher value added products and applications. In addition to the metallurgical peculiarities and relationships between chemical composition, process and final properties, the relevance, impact of advanced characterization techniques and innovative modelling strategies provides new tools to achieve the further deployment of the TMCP technologies. The contents of the book cover low carbon microalloyed grades, ferritic stainless steels and Fe-Al-Cr alloys, medium Mn steels and medium carbon grades. Authors of the chapters of this Thermomechanical Processing of Steels book represent some of the most relevant research groups from both the steel industry and academia.
