My Cat Would Not Make A Very Good Fire Fighter:

Misadventures with a Firefighter Julie Morgan, 2020-01-14 Cara Murphy is a New York City kindergarten teacher with a bright future and tenure on the horizon and she won't let anything any man distract her. She's had her heart broken before and she won't make that mistake twice. She's got her career to focus on and being single has many many advantages. Noah Hughes is a firefighter with a charred heart who heats up every room he enters but he lives solely for the happiness of his five year old son. When he crosses paths with Cara at a club sparks fly and they share a hot night of passion. But that flame is quickly doused during a surprise second encounter. Continuing to see each other would truly be playing with fire but Cara and Noah can't stop. Still Cara's career is in jeopardy and Noah's heart is locked in guilt. Is there really a chance they could build a love that forever burns bright? Misadventures is a romantic series of spicy standalone novels each written or co-written by some of the best names in romance. The stories are scandalous, refreshing and of course incredibly sexy. They're the perfect bedside read, a quick blush for the reader who loves a page turning romance.

Distributing the Harm of Just Wars Sara Van Goozen, 2021-03-10 This book argues that the risk of harm in armed conflict should be divided equally between combatants and enemy non-combatants. International law requires that combatants in war take all feasible precautions to minimise damage to civilian objects, injury to civilians and incidental loss of civilian life. However, there is no clear explanation of what feasible precautions means in this context or what would count as sufficiently minimised incidental harm. As a result, it is difficult to judge whether a particular war or offensive actually satisfies this requirement. Just war theorists often consider it common sense that merely not intending to harm innocent civilians is not sufficient but there is little clarity in the literature regarding what this means. One crucial question that is almost always overlooked is that of what the appropriate baseline distribution of risk should be. This book defends the Minimal Harm Requirement (MHR) which states that combatants should make an effort to reduce merely foreseen harm to enemy non-combatants to the lowest reasonable level. In order to assess which risk impositions are reasonable and which are not, an egalitarian baseline should be adopted suggesting that other things being equal, risk of harm should be distributed equally between just combatants and unjust non-combatants. This book will be of much interest to students of just war theory, ethics, security studies and international relations.

The Firefighter's Cinderella Dominique Burton, 2011-10-01 The first time C J Powell rescues her, Natasha Bennington is running a marathon honoring the memory of their friend. Now her work fighting for humanitarian rights is once again putting her at risk. And the rugged San Francisco firefighter has crowned himself her designated hero. Catching the stunning brunette when she collapses at the finish line isn't the way C J imagined meeting Tasha again. A year ago she'd been hopelessly in love with his best friend. Now the fiercely dedicated pro bono attorney needs his protection, especially after a deadly threat forces Tasha to flee to C J's hometown. There are worse things than hiding out in the breathtaking wilds of Alaska with the woman he adores. Now C J has a more urgent mission: keeping Tasha safe until the danger's past and she's
