

Introduction to Tape Diagrams

Tape diagrams are often used to model ratios when the two quantities have the same units.

Sample Problem

1. David and Jason have marbles in a ratio of 2:3. Together, they have a total of 55 marbles. How many marbles does each boy have?

Tape diagrams are visual models that are rectangles to represent the parts of a ratio. Since they are a visual model, drawing them requires attention to details in the setup. In this problem, David and Jason have numbers of marbles in a ratio of 2:3. This ratio is modeled here by drawing 2 rectangles to represent David's portion, and 3 rectangles to represent Jason's portion. The rectangles have uniform width and lined up, e.g., on the left hand side, for easy visual reference. The large bracket on the right denotes the total number of marbles David and Jason have (55). It is clear visually that the boys have 5 rectangles worth of marbles, and that the total number of marbles is 55. This information will be used to solve the problem.

- 5 rectangles = 55 marbles Dividing both numbers of rectangles and marbles by 5
 1 rectangle = 11 marbles This information will be used to solve the problem.
 David has 2 rectangles and $2 \times 11 = 22$ marbles. Therefore David has 22 marbles.
 Jason has 3 rectangles and $3 \times 11 = 33$ marbles. Therefore Jason has 33 marbles.
