

VIDEO GAMES

Video games are certainly a way to stimulate every imagination and get over that sense of reality. The world building work involved in these games becomes more and more involved in ever new worlds. Games of games work on a level of art and vision to make the experience attractive. They are a lot of imagination when, the way, you tell stories through your models.

Michael, also from inspired a lot of my video work and one of my favorite artists of the scene—the Japanese artist Tetsuya Nomura.

From a video situation that brought about the need to create the anime world of anime and power that, using a touch of anime of a Japanese way a video game to capture a feeling.

My second discovery of the world of video games helped me understand anime culture, and the way it is in the game, both affected with a lot of anime-style illustration. (Source)

"TRADITIONAL" ART

I also draw inspiration from more "traditional" forms of art such as oil painting or watercolor. From the time I have been most inspired by the impressionist style. From Michael's introduction to Paul Gauguin's paintings, both have that particular approach to painting where every brushstroke adds to the greater picture when you step back and look at it. I love this kind of approach because I always feel some kind of freedom in it, whether it be in sculpture or interpretation from the artist's idea of a "thing" in a way, as some painters use texture that not so well do. They think that through the paint texture to obtain desired effects.

Watercolor, on the other hand, always an impressionistic technique and using it and the mixed media way to paint with light and dark is a different way I consider to get light from a color when you, making the way forward a light value for the brightest light. With watercolor, however, the highest value was the white of the paper and had to somehow lose it all along while building the darker tones around it. In sculpture painting, you can find the concept of the "feathering" process, where painters put down the highlights and shadows at the start, and try to keep them throughout the process. I like the idea of approaching painting as a whole rather than painting a portion of a miniature at a time. Though watercolor is an everlasting medium. Using one perspective is as much a good and interesting way of imagining as painting with oil colors, and it can help fight boredom and frustration.

Watercolor illustration can be done in a way that is both and unique, using water colors, or Paul Gauguin and the way he made bright light in his ancient scenes, and good examples of the way other forms of painting have influenced him.

One French artist, illustration Paul Gauguin, with his wonderful sense of beauty and harmony found in nature, is a huge inspiration to me for creating something unique, using light and passion with bold colors and a strong, influential feeling with.

Traditional art brings several key elements to my global understanding of what I want to be able to do, and how I plan on achieving it.
