

Hanging indents: worth the extra effort?

Melissa Adams

Sep 28 at 5:42pm

The hanging indent is a useful formatting feature of APA References page-style citations. This feature allows readers to quickly scan a long list of References for the author last names they see in the article's in-text citations. When students post to discussion forums in an academic APA style, typically, students cite few articles, perhaps as few as one. For the reader of that post, there is no long list of References to scan, so the hanging indent is not particularly useful. In addition, making a hanging indent in the Canvas discussion forums takes extra effort, so Adams (2016) encourages students posting to a discussion forum to simply type up a perfect APA References citation, minus the hanging indent. This is a reasonable, efficient suggestion.
