Postharvest Biotechnology of Flowers and Ornamental Plants Dattajirao K. Salunkhe, Narayana R. Bhat, Babasaheb B. Desai, 2012-12-06 The floricultural industry has been undergoing an unprecedented revolution in terms of the type of commodity produced and the production and marketing technology in both developed and developing countries. As a result of this revolution as we know today there is a flower for every purpose and for every person in the world as is evident from the slogan of the Society for American Florists: 'say it with flowers'. In recent years the Latin American and European countries have become sizeable competitors for the North American fresh flower markets and the trend continues growing. Like any other crop production, floricultural production can be divided into three basic factors: 1 production costs, 2 quality, 3 transportation costs. All these must be optimum for this area or industry to be safe from competition. With increasing consumer awareness and the current recession, the pressure from the artificial floral products industry and also of neighbouring countries on the American fresh flower industry and continued competition even amongst the growers, wholesalers and retailers, quality in floricultural industry is becoming increasingly important to all those concerned with handling these products. The visual quality aspects of the product are the sole determiner of consumer acceptability in this industry and unlike fruits and vegetables, flowers cannot be marketed by just discarding the damaged portion. Auxins and Plant Growth Aldo Carl Leopold, 1963 Fundamentals of auxins: action, development of knowledge of auxins, auxins: extraction and measurement techniques, the occurrence and role of growth hormones in plants, developmental effects of auxins, physiological and anatomical effects of auxin applications, factors altering effectiveness of auxin application, the chemical nature of growth regulators, theories of the mechanism of auxin action, auxins of agriculture, methods of applying auxins and their persistence in plants and soil, rooting, parthenocarpy, flower and fruit thinning, control of preharvest fruit drop, flowering, dormancy and storage, herbicides, miscellaneous uses of auxins, potential of auxins and auxin research. Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893, Voices Revived makes high-quality, peer-reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print-on-demand technology. This title was originally published in 1955. Agricultural Index, 1927 Geographic Variation in Forest Trees Maria Morgenstern, 2011-11-01 Geographic variation within tree species is one of the basic issues facing foresters, biologists, and others who work with trees. Genetic differences among and within populations of these trees become important considerations when forests are regenerated artificially by seeding and planting and when new species are introduced in forestry, agroforestry, or for ornamental and landscape purposes. Geographic Variation in Forest Trees is the first book to examine this subject from a world-wide perspective. Following a historical review, the author discusses population genetic theory and genetic systems of native North American tree species as they interact with environments in the major climatic regions in the world He then demonstrates how this knowledge is used to guide seed zoning and seed transfer in silviculture basing much of his discussion on models developed in Scandinavia and North America In the final chapter the author addresses the issue of genetic conservation a subject of great concern in the face of accelerated forest destruction industrial pollution and climatic change This comprehensive well researched book makes a significant contribution to the knowledge of one of our most important renewable natural resources Revue Agronomique Canadien ,1923 Experiment Station Record U.S. Office of Experiment Stations,United States.
