Immigrant Women's Voices and Integrating Feminism Into Migration Theory Nyemba, Florence, Chitiyo, Rufaro, 2020-12-25 Migration is a multifaceted phenomenon that plays a critical role in today's world yet there have been few attempts to look beneath the surface of the mass movements of people. Particularly the changing face of migration is becoming more feminized with women increasingly moving as independent or single migrants rather than as the wives, mothers or daughters of male migrants. Yet in literature on migration the voices of women are still silent. This creates an urgent need to advance academic research on female international migration by examining women as independent migrants. Immigrant Women's Voices and Integrating Feminism Into Migration Theory comprehensively documents the experiences of immigrant women across the globe and the important theories that define their experiences. The chapters give firsthand accounts of women speaking about their own experiences on migration and topics associated with women and migration. This book aims to give women their own voice and to stand apart from previous literature in which male relatives spoke on behalf of immigrant women to tell their stories for them. While highlighting topics on women in migration including feminism, gendered social roles, first person narratives and the female identity, this book is ideally for professionals in social science disciplines as well as practitioners, stakeholders, researchers, academicians and students wanting to expand their knowledge on women and migration, gender violence and women empowerment.

Power, Politics and the Emotions Shona Hunter, 2015-06-05 How can we rethink ideas of policy failure to consider its paradoxes and contradictions as a starting point for more hopeful democratic encounters? Offering a provocative and innovative theorisation of governance as relational politics, the central argument of Power, Politics and the Emotions is that there are sets of affective dynamics which complicate the already materially and symbolically contested terrain of policy making. This relational politics is Shona Hunter's starting point for a more hopeful but realistic understanding of the limits and possibilities enacted through contemporary governing processes. Through this idea, Hunter prioritises the everyday lived enactments of policy as a means to understand the state as a more differentiated and changeable entity than is often allowed for in current critiques of neoliberalism. But Hunter reminds us that focusing on lived realities demands a melancholic confrontation with pain and the risks of social and physical death and violence lived through the contemporary neoliberal state. This is a state characterised by the ascendancy of neoliberal whiteness, a state where no one is innocent and we are all responsible for the multiple intersecting exclusionary practices creating its unequal social orderings. The only way to struggle through the central paradox of governance to produce something different is to accept this troubling interdependence between resistance and reproduction and between hope and loss. Analysing the everyday processes of this relational politics through original empirical studies in health, social care and education, the book develops an innovative interdisciplinary theoretical synthesis which engages with and extends work in political science, cultural theory, critical race and feminist analysis, critical psychoanalysis and post-material sociology.

Women, Power, and the Academy Mary-Louise Kearney, 2000 Many nations affirm the principle of gender equality As women continue to advance in most walks of life the impression that equality has been reached and that gender issues no longer pose real problems has naturally gained ground Yet many cultural economic and social barriers remain Although as many women as men possess the skills necessary to shape social and economic development women are still prevented from fully participating in decision making processes The papers collected in this volume focus on universities as one of the key institutions providing women with the education and leadership skills necessary for their advancement Equally important is the role universities play in the shaping of a society's cultural fabric and consequently of attitudes towards women and their place in society Both aspects are examined in this volume on the basis of a number of case studies carried out in western and non western societies

Fragmenting Work Mick Marchington, 2005 This major new book examines the way in which employment is managed across organizational boundaries It analyses how public private partnerships franchises agencies and other forms of inter firm contractual relations impact on work and employment and the experiences of those working in these increasingly significant forms of organization It draws upon research undertaken in eight separate networks comprising over 50 organizations to explore the fragmenting effects of contemporary changes in the organization of work and employment relationships It considers the consequences of increased reliance upon inter organizational mechanisms for producing goods and especially for delivering services It argues that established analyses continue to rely too heavily upon a model of the single employing organization whereas today the situation is often more complex and confused Public private partnerships are one high profile example of this phenomenon but private enterprises are also developing new relations with their clients and customers that impinge upon the nature of the employment relationship Established hierarchical forms are becoming disordered with consequences for career patterns training and skills pay structures disciplinary practice worker voice and the gendered division of labor The findings of the study raise questions about the governance of such complex organizational forms the appropriateness of current institutions for addressing this complexity and the challenge of harnessing of employee commitment in circumstances where human resource practices are shaped by organizations other than the legal employer Using an analytical schema of three dimensions institutional organizational employment and four themes power risk identity trust the authors adopt an inter disciplinary perspective to address these complex and critically important practical policy and theoretical concerns Fragmenting Work will be vital reading for all those wishing to understand the contemporary realities of work and employment

Academic Women in Neoliberal Times Briony Lipton, 2020-06-24 This book investigates the gendered dimensions of academic life in the contemporary Australian university It examines key discourses most notably academic performativity and identity through a feminist lens and scrutinises how discourses of neoliberalism and feminism are entangled in the structure systems operations and cultures of the university Drawing on in depth qualitative interviews with academic women in Australia the author uses a mix of experimental methods to emphasise the performative and discursive decisions women make with regard to their academic careers In doing so this book reveals how women themselves generate neoliberal and feminist shifts how they manage the contradictions they produce and how they carve spaces of influence and authority Moving towards a re evaluation of existing discourses this book offers new insights into gender inequality in the Australian university in neoliberal times Gender and the Public
